Chapter 1 by Sadie

Prologue - The world is gone. No life, no light, no humanity. Nothing is left. 7 billion people died in the last year, all of them were converted to the life us survivors call the Living Hell. The disease killed most, but horror killed the others. Some committed suicide, too scared to go on. Others killed themselves by never being careful. All of us living understand perfectly now, the dead walk among us. Every choice is a risk we must take to either save our lives, or put us in danger. Every breath we draw and release is the only way we're separated from the dead, and the only way we're considered alive. All of us now know the real meaning of silence.
